Chapter 1 by SAMANTHA REINER

I've been in this prison since my whole life started. My momma died when I was a baby. So ever since she died this orphaned took me. At first, when I was a baby, I didn't remember much but to me it was amazing. But now I'm 12 and it's horrible. They make me clean, make dinner, and keep care of the others. I hate it. I wish my momma never had died if she didn't I'll probably be living a good life right now. I was stuck here forever.

I stuck my head out of my window. Since I am always in trouble I have my own cell, cause they think it'll cause the rest of the children in danger of getting stupid like me. In that cell, at least, it's quite and no winning little children. I looked how all the stars were free. I wish I could be like them. My favorite star is the second North star, it made me feel like there was still hope for me. One night I thought I saw something come out of it, like a little twinkle. But it was probably just my imagination.

"Marley Mon." I looked up and I saw the headmistress of the orphaned, Mrs. Crank, and then there's Mr. Crank. Trust me they are cranky. "It's time to go Marley." I hated that name. Since they thought I was supposed to be a boy they named me Marley. But when they saw that I was a girl they didn't care to change the name to a girl name. One day I made Mrs. Crank jealous cause I had long beautiful hair and she I haven't got all day for you

"You changed me up so of course I can't get up, you..."

"10 more hours in the cell. I guess i'll bring you your lunch, Okay." Great not again. This is my 100th time I have been in here, and of course she will bring me my lunch... after dinner cause she's so drunk sometimes she doesn't remember anything. I wish I could just fly away from here.
